7. Editorial Column

An editorial column is written by the editor or editorial staff of the newspaper or publication which shares the publication's views or opinions on a topic. Standard columns are objective and focus on facts but this column carry strong opinions of the newspaper on issues. Every newspaper has editorial board to review the topics in news and inform their point of view to its readers.

8. Specialized Columns

These columns are limited to a single subject and throw light on questions and issues related to it. It includes "Legal Column" which disseminate information on legal issue people face on daily basis and provide advices. Religious Column for religious matters, Astrology, Fashion, Medical, Human Resources, Personality Development, Children columns and many more. They are written in simple language. We can say them professional columns also.

9. How- to-do or Advice Columns

Advice Column is a part of newspaper or magazine in which advice is given to its readers on their personal or social issues. Instructions are given in a gentle way to educate the people and help them to overcome their problems.

10. Literary Columns

Now a days we see good number of column written of literacy and educational problems in and outside the country. They highlight the current trend and activities on national and international level. Promote library and reading books to enrich the reader and help in developing literary taste.

To write these columns you have to have that type of qualities and wider knowledge of life and letters. Not every journalist can do this. To review or appreciate any piece of creative work you must know the person's past work and be able to compare with other creative persons of the same group.

Write the importance of unusualness for feature writers?

Human interest and feature writing are close to each other. It is hard to define human interest because most feature writer's stories are unusual about kids, animals and human emotions/feelings which have automatic human-interest value. Therefore, if a writer wants to write a man's profile whose aim is to trap or free birds for a living, perhaps you have a suitably unusual story for broad reader appeal which itself has great importance.

You can write a feature without human interest, conflict, prominence, and unusualness, but it'll not be so interesting if your feature does not have these qualities. A dull feature does not appeal to the readers except the subject of the article. Though, unusualness is very important to the feature writer. For example, a university teacher who turns junkman is, in fact, unusual. A junkyard owner who earns his doctor of philosophy degree and becomes a university teacher is equally unusual. In contrast, a male registered nurse is less unusual, and not worth a story.

A strong human interest feature has three things to verify if a story is truly unusual.

- (1) Describes extraordinary experience
- (2) Shows how people have coped with a common issue
- (3) Focuses on a timely issue of wide regional/national concern.

'Think before writing'. Elaborate it with reference to features.

Think before writing refers to know how to write. It is a careful guidance while writing a feature story. When a writer "Thinks before writing" a feature story he outlines the order to present the following facts:

1. From where to start and finish.
2. May be closing either with a surprise or dialogue, as most of the human-interest/feature stories follow the regular pyramid order.

Though, it is sensible to follow a narrative/chronological order because most of the feature stories follow this order, but some stories follow a combination of both pyramid and narrative orders.

Discuss the difference between feature and column writing? (5 Marks - Lesson 1 & Lesson 19)

Feature Writing

A feature is creative and some times subjective article written to entertain and inform readers. It has more detail and background, based on extensive research on event or situation to entertain and inform readers. It covers all possible aspect of the event from all the angles.

Features are based on facts and needs reporting not cut in make-up. They are longer than standard news story. There is no time limit but if feature written on current issues it will have more value and credibility. There is no formal format but its contents to appropriate. It allows the writer to use his knowledge and shows originality in ideas. Opening sentences are always striking to get quickly readers attention.

Column Writing

Column is an editorial written by a journalist with a by-line. They are written on different issues ranging from economic to social, education, health, governance and political issues. It is not necessary that the written column reflects the editorial policy of the newspaper. It is a place where writer expresses his opinion and it shows diversity in media journalism. It is a regular feature in publication, written by the same writer.

Columns are most powerful medium of any publication and has longest life as compare to other news. It is read by most of the decision makers or influential people. They analyse the column and some times the columnist has to face criticism also. Due to political situations, mostly columns are written on political affairs and different opinions and analysis makes broader picture in readers mind. The columnist becomes famous in a short time depending on his language, ideas and writing skills.

What do you know about the conclusion of features? (3 Marks - Lesson 8)

Conclusion is your last chance to persuade your readers. It ties everything together and presents your feature as a polished and well integrated. It sum up everything nicely you have already talked about. It is a good opportunity to make final good impression with a positive note. It can be done though short, tight summary supported by anecdote or a quote which takes the reader toward a climax.

How diversity of thought influences the column writing? (5 Marks - Lesson 20)

Diversity means variety "range of different things". It is very important in column writing. Columnist become famous because of their diverse ideas on different subjects. Even if they write on particular subject their written piece has their own idea and research. Reader will get different aspect of the single subject. Columnist also follow different editorial policies and as a result readers get pro govt and as well as anti govt point of view, pro political party or anti political party versions.

Another beauty is that every columnist show different angle of the story and is based on changing circumstances. For instance if curbs on media is a threat to democracy they change their style but on the other hand they also criticise media for not being accountable. Diversity of thought adds value to the columns and because of their unpredictability and different point of view keeps people interest constant.

What does newspaper readers want to read?

Newspapers performing the five roles and they are: commercial, information, opinion, entertainment and public forum. The readers who are not familiar with its functions name these parts differently like "news, editorials, advertising, letters to the editors and the comics". These names are easily understood except "the comic". The comic strip in the newspaper means that the newspaper has the ability to entertain and integrate the material from column to crossword puzzle, to funny story of a local person. Features in newspapers comes in news and timeless varieties, they are very important and must be thing or people oriented. A story on tombstone manufacturing will be thing oriented but article on women and her children is people oriented.

English and Urdu columns which one is more popular among Pakistani people and why? (3 Marks - Lesson 21)

Urdu is our national language and is widely spoken in Pakistan. Our ulemas, religious and political leaders express themselves in Urdu. Urdu columns are read by millions of people in homes and offices, tea stalls and hair saloons, hotels and restaurants, buses, trains and in airplanes. Their readership varies from the local vendor to the decision makers of the country. With its wide range of readers; it becomes easy for the columnists to choose subjects of their own choice, which makes the Urdu columnists more popular among the masses. The Urdu columnists are always coming up with popular ideas with a touch of sensation, as they find readership of varied senses and tastes.

English columns are written for selected class of readers because it is not widely spoken in Pakistan. It is a language of business and govt people. These selected people are well educated and have influence in decision making. English columns always focus to teach their readers and pin pointing the core issues of life and politics. These columns are based on arguments not on emotions.

What is meant by Suspended interest intro?

What are the three thumb rules to avoid making mistakes in feature writing? (3 Marks - Lesson 18)

To avoid making mistakes, following three rules are very important:

1. First time get it right. Make sure the names and their spellings are right along with other important information. Do not keep it pending to be verified later. Get confirmation during reporting process.
2. Do not trust your memory. During interview make notes and keep facts sheet in proper sequence. If you find something missing in notes or contradictory statements or facts, do a followup and try to sort this out directly from the concerned person.
3. Once writing is finished, it's good idea to go back and read all the notes agains and verify each point. It's a good practice especially if your subject is complex like financial matters or medical procedure. If you are using terminology, nothing wrong to ask specialised people. If you are in doubt, feel free to ask them "Has this been written accurately?"

What is interview? (3 Marks - Lesson 6)

The word "interview" came from Latin and French. Its meaning is "see each other or see between". An interview is a formal meeting between people when questions are asked and answered. The person who asks the questions is called interviewer and who answered is called interviewee. In media, interviews are conducted by reporters to get more information on specific issue from an expert or people of high value whose opinion matters and they do not get time to share their point of view or experience with public. The appointment for the questions & answers session is called interview.

What do you know about Business story?

A business story is written to stand out from your competitors? To inform people about your products and service. Stories are memorable and they help to persuade people. It is very easy to write an uninspiring feature about any business. Such stories are boring and without interest except for the business owner. Boring stories can damage your reputation.

So, what's your business story? Can your story tell exactly what you do? The objective of the business story must be simple. "Share your story to connect better to your customer and you will build your business." Your story should improve the overall impression of your business. You will be paid for the feature so must not forward copy material. It should have different flavour and angles to highlight. The following different types of stories can be used in business:

Your back story: How did you start and what was your turning point?

- The Passion Story: Do you love what you do? People buy why you do it not buy what you do.
- The Personality Story: Your personality features highlighting why people might work with you.
- The customer Story: Showing who are your customers? How are you serving them? The level of satisfaction and appreciation on your business.
- The employee Story: How much your employees are satisfied? Their working relation and work environment.

“Lead is more important for a good feature but there is a need for solid transition into the body of a good feature.” Discuss? (5 Marks - Lesson 8)

Lead (sometimes spell Lede) plays an important role to get readers attention and pull him into the story. A good lead paints a colorful picture of the story in few words. It can be different in style and content. It is the beginning paragraph of a story which must be accurate, short and crisp to reflect the mood of the story. A lead could be descriptive, narrative, mystery, teaser, contrast/now-and-then.

Transitions are words and phrases that create link between leads and body paragraphs. It help to make feature flowing better. Write goal is to convey information clearly so transition help in creating link between different sections of the feature. It helps reader to continue and provide some kind of satisfaction in the shape of entertainment, information.

What is currency?

In media, main focus is on the news happening today. Currency refers to the consistency of information. It means stories that have not happened now but have ongoing interest for readers. For example the rise and fall in the price of petrol going on for many years but still relevant to people. The date of the publication is the first indicator in printed documents. Sometimes the date is not as important as the authorship or place of an event has importance.

Following criteria is applicable to make sure of the currency:

- Date of Information gathering to be included.
- Whenever there is an update or new data added, it must be recorded.
- Publication date or when last update happened.
- Copyright date to be included.
- If you do not find date in an electronic document, you can view the document created
- date and when modifications happened last time.

What is interview?

The word “interview” came from Latin and French. Its meaning is “see each other” or “see between”. An interview is a formal meeting between people when questions are asked and answered. Panel Interviews

When more than one person conduct interview it is called panel interview. The panalist devide the area as per their specialization and ask questions one by one. This interview is required when the interviewee is holding a top slot and performing multiple task like Prime Minister of a country or Minister or CEO of a big organization.

Interviewee could be a literary personality, politician, sports person or celebrity of show biz. Some time interview is based on situation and many people are asked questions to know how like in case of earthquake or fire in a building or tragic accidents.

Kinds of interviews

Following are the types of interviews:

Informative

This interview is taken to get facts from the people who are responsible for something or have witnessed or participated in an event or participated in it.

Opinion

This interview is to get the opinion or comments on events or issues. There are no standard questions in this type of interview. It depends on interviewers how he prepared the questions to learn about you and the way you think.

Personality-based

Interview of a celebrity or well-known person to know his personality, his interests, life and activities. However, scenario will be different if the person is not famous.

Sidebar, Profiles and Series

Sidebar, Profiles and Series are special things in newspaper and magazine writing. They can be proposed and written by individual writers assigned by the editors.

A sidebar is a shorter piece of text that leads to a longer article in a newspaper or magazines. Graphically they are separated but related to the main idea. It can be placed anywhere having few sentences or complementing the article. Profiles are color stories normally wheather printed in a newspaper or magazine. Series are also colorfull but they can be anything having interest for the writer, editor as well as readers. Series covered important topics and fact fillers.

Characteristics of the The Deadline Feature Sidebar?

Sidebar for a magazines are often written against severe deadlines. In newspapers sidebar are used to fit breaking news and always written in the last minute. Sidebar can be written on any subject but have the following qualities.

- The editor assigned the sidebar and is written by individual writers.
- The Sidebar can be facts but most of the time a it is a feature story based on human interest. It could be colourfull if the event is happy or grey if event is based on tragedy.
- A sidebar may continue on the same page or jump to another page.
- Generally a stright news story written in the side bar is breaking news.
- It stand independently and always lead to the main story explaining enough important points to the reader to understand even if he skip the main story.
- Most of the time the side bar is wriiten in hurry, but if time allows it can be written very well.

What is profile?

Profiles are favourite for newspapers and magazines. It is a type of feature story that focuses on a person and what's interesting about that person. In daily newspapers it is difficult to differentiate between profile or personality note. Basically it is an in-depth study of different people of interest. In magazines the profiles run longer and have depth. The beauty of a profile is whether it is short or long, it helps the reader to know the topic. Most profiles are written by newspaper or magazine staff. The freelancers did not get a chance to hold an exclusive interview with a famous person.

There are different ways of writing about different people. Writers often use present tense. The trick in writing profile is to go deep with research, observation and experience in interviewing. If the story is newsworthy, the writer always converts it into a straight-news story from the beginning. The issue writer faces when they have to tell their story after going through many documents and lengthy manuscript in a short time.

Best solution is to have in-depth knowledge of the subject. Interesting writing techniques boost the story if written in a short paragraph. The important point is that how you first create interest in the reader to start the story and bring him to the strong conclusion.

How the feature writer make the feature effective? OR Demands of a feature (Lesson 5)

A feature is a creative and sometimes subjective article written to entertain and inform readers. The following demands must be met by the writer to make feature effective:

Explanation

Features are based on interesting stories to get people's attention immediately. It must be explained in a language comprehensible to the people. Writing feature is actually giving details of the event with facts and findings based on truth. The background to be presented side by side with personal feelings and impressions. These things help the writer to reach on a firm conclusion to shape public opinion.

Interest and Entertainment

Basically feature is an attractive news story with details. It includes color photographs which make it more eye-catching to increase the interest and provide entertainment. If we see it from facts side it looks like a news story. If we see the description side it looks like a drama. How much you create interest in story that much chances of its success. It is the demand of the feature when providing entertainment must give moral and ethical guidelines to the readers.

Information and guidance

Feature's objective is to inform and guide people and this is the success of newspaper. If feature does not have objective the entertainment element is not enough for its success in any newspaper or magazine.

Both sides of picture

A good feature always tells both side of the story or event because they are based on real life and written on current issues. Facts and figures are gathered from relevant person and writer's imagination and creative skills make feature more interesting.

Diagnosis of Problems

Features reflects mood of the society and feature is incomplete if it does not diagnosis the problems prevailing in the society. When facts and figures are studied it highlights the causes and reasons which led to that event. Features guide readers to its possible solutions and offer social services to its readers.

Favourite of readers

Features are favourite among readers because they are full of valuable information long with different narrates of the story supported by color full text and photographs. Because of features popularity their write are more famous. It is a perfect article written in an stylish way to keep readers interest alive and this helps in increasing the newspapers circualtion

Attractive prose pieces

The feature write must keep in mind the likes and dislikes, peoples requirements and psychology when writing feature. Long article with boaring and dry information force them to find alternatives which are written in simple way and easy to understandable with interest. People like simple story and directly related to them. Features can be written on different topic like education, health, entertainment. It capture readers interest from the beginning till its conclusion.

Briefly describe the Hodge-podge column.

The columnist does not stick to one subject, but mentions several things is called Hodge Podge column. The purpose of providing variety in column is to get readers interest. He can add poem here or announcement, a joke, an interesting question or moderanized proverb.

Readers interest is yardstick to determine the length of feature. Describe.

Fatures stories are longer than column becasue it discuss the issue or event in details with fact and figures supported by colourfull graphics in a story telling style. It could be long as much as it is interessted and have newsworuth elements. Usually they are long from two or three paragraphs till multiple pages. Reasders interst is the main engine which drives the story and judged by peoples interest. It an editor job to assess the reasders interest and keep the features in it.

Characteristics of features?

- Features inform, educate and advise but have more entertaining elements.
- They could be any length ranging from couple of paragraphs till multiple pages.
- Based on facts and requires in deoth reproting.
- Features may or may not be timely written. If it is timely written and related to current news they will get more attention of the readers.
- Writer can write in any form and style using his knowledge and skills. It must be appropriate and serve the purpose of the story.
- More often they have novelty leads and well organised and carefully written.
- Opening sentences are keynotes which allows readers to read more.
- Features are not in cut in makeup and allows writer to apply his imagination.
- Vivid images are created supoorted by sound and feeling with specific nouns, adjectives and verbs.
- Due to the availability of the time, writing can be improved by eliminating the writing faults.

What is meant by commemorative stories?

Commemorative stories is recalling an event that already happened in the past. This is usually written on the first anniversary with other stories after five year gap. People can be interviewed who were involved or related in that event. Writer can write an article to capture the mood of the people.

What is meant by Feature series?

Features series is a showcase of the daily newspaper along with many top magazines. A lot of time is required for writer and editor to write this. The feature series can be written about any subject of interest, however the time is very important issue. Multipart series have a chance of winning almost any category for example explanatory journalism, national reporting etc. The features series often talk about the less important factors.

Why readers consider columns more important than feature?

A feature is written to entertain and inform readers. It is creative and some times subjective. It has more detail and background, based on extensive research on event or situation. It covers all possible aspect of the event from all the angles. They are longer than standard news story and there is no time limit.

Column Writing

Column is an editorial written by a journalist with a by-line. They are written on different issues ranging from economic to social, education, health, governance and political issues. It is not necessary that the written column reflects the editorial policy of the newspaper. It is a place where writer expresses his opinion and it shows diversity in media journalism. It is a regular feature in publication, written by the same writer.

Columns are most powerful medium of any publication and has longest life as compare to other news. It is read by most of the decision makers or influential people. They analyse the column and some times the columnist has to face criticism also. Due to political situations, mostly columns are written on political affairs and different opinions and analysis makes broader picture in readers mind. The columnist becomes famous in a short time depending on his language, ideas and writing skills.

Explain Byline

A line in a newspaper article specifying the name of the writer is called Byline. It starts with the word "By". It is originated in United States in 1926. By enhance the article credibility and gives readers option to question the source directly. If no byline is mentioned it states that the written information is from anonymous resources.

According to a loose or general definition, interview is 'Asking questions to obtain information'. Strict or technical definition: Asking questions to obtain opinions, ideas, or special information on a topic of interest from a prominent person or a recognised authority.

What is Column writing?

"All those writings are columns published on regular basis under a permanent caption in the periodicals and the periodicals." Column has been described as an editorial with a by-line by the journalists. Column-writing is one -of the most satisfying and rewarding journalistic exercise or assignment which is equal to personalised journalism. It is the field where a column writer is invested with ample independence and liberty to write on any topic or subject, with a clear flair of creative approach.

What is article writing?

An article is a piece of writing, complete in itself, written for publication in a newspaper, or magazine. It is intended for wide range of readers so must be attractive. It can include interesting stories, reported speeches and event descriptions. It has fact, thoughts and opinions in a less formal style. It has four parts, Intro, Nut Graph, Main body and Conclusion.

Are there any Legal and ethical considerations for writers which they are supposed to adhere?

As free as the press may be in this country, there are still certain restrictions and limitations that writers must keep firmly in mind. The most important of these, for your purposes, are the laws pertaining to libel, privacy and copyright. However, there are also some pertinent ethical restrictions not governed by law. Ethics are a personal, private matter to be decided by each writer according to the dictates of conscience, but publishing etiquette demands adherence to some basic ethical principles.

What are the key tips to naturally improve one's language?

Answer: There are four key areas, which must be strived for all the time, as these help in naturally improving one's language, as cramming never helps anybody. •

Reading – devour books and magazines – A journalist must be reading newspapers and magazines on daily basis.

- Listening – keep tuned to good channels – A journalist must be a good listener too.
- Speaking – make a try, you will be better – It has been observed that quite a large number of journalists are not good at communicating verbally, and there are those who can speak very well but when it comes to writing they always leave bad impression.
- Writing – most important but no way impossible – For every journalist, writing is a must, and while doing so, he must be doing it to the best of his abilities.

Article writing is more boring compare to other form of writing, Discuss

An article is a piece of writing, complete in itself, written for publication in a newspaper, or magazine. It can include interesting stories, reported speeches and event descriptions.

It is boring because the writer only discuss the subject from one angle and does not focus other perspective, which is exactly opposite a feature. Article also restricts the writer to include personal views. It needs lot of research and make sure the facts and figures are not only accurate but available in multiple numbers. To get this the writer needs to dig out library, seek information from reference collections, periodicals and indexes.

What is resource box?

The Resource Box is the short biography of the author, come under your article each time it is written or published. It is very important because it promotes you different ways.

It contains a link to your website so whenever your article is published, a link to your website is mentioned so readers can visit your website and know about yourself. It established your expertise and readers will regard your piece of information more reliable and authentic. Your written article will give reason to readers for a call to action and that is in your resource box. In this way you convert your readers into clickers. Each click to your website generate traffic and people start know about yourself.

What kind of writing, column writing is? Or the essentials and basic points that go in to the forming of a Column?

Writing column is easier than cover straight news of writing feature stories. Straight news are boring because you cover the press conference, receive press release and report them. Features require too much reporting and needs to follow a structure.

Columns are opinion pieces and does not require a formal structure. It requires a good thinking. Column writing is essential and fulfilling the needs of the newspaper and periodicals. Columns are written on different issues ranging from economic to social, education, health, governance and political issues. The basis of column writing relates to past practise of personal journalism.

The style of writing is natural and directly addressed to the readers. Columns have brief, comprehensive and precise information, news and announcement. Your opinions must be logical, making sense and convincing in an light entertaining way.

Column Writing Tips

Many young writers prefer to write columns rather than straight news or features. Straight news is deemed to be boring – covering press conferences and reporting who said what. Feature stories involve too much reporting and require discipline to follow a set structure. Columns, which are essentially opinion pieces, are much looser – and therefore easier. Or so it seems. Anybody can be trained to write straight news because it's very mechanical. Feature articles, though also somewhat formulaic, are harder because they require good writing. But column writing is the hardest type of writing of all because it requires good thinking.

To write a good column requires more than just the ability to articulate an opinion. Your opinions must make sense, provide insight and be convincing. And you must do all this in an entertaining way.

What do you know by Chronological Order?

Writing an article is as important as telling a story. Readers always prefer to read a story which is clearly and naturally explained. Confusing story will distract them to leave. Readers have short attention duration. You must hook them into your story from start to finish.

Describing a story in proper sequence (first this happened and then this) is called Chronological Order. It linked all important elements with each other in an proper order to make sense. The inverted Pyramid is the most common way to organized a story. The most important information always comes first. You begin with the lead that summarize your story. Than you provides background information followed by more details about the story.

What is first step towards writing a column?

The first and most important step is to know why are you writing and who are your audience. Are you writing to inform people about event or issue? Is this directly relates to them and they want to know more about it?

If a writer is writing about health and fitness, the general public and youth is his audience. He will have knowledge on the lifestyle and eating habits. Writing style will be soft. The lead sentence will attract the reader and the rest of the column will explain simple steps on diet and exercise. If the writer provides sources it s credibility will increase. Short and to the point explanation will make easy to understand.

What are carry over transitional devices?

It is one of the effective writing technique to be followed. Once you are finishing your thought in a paragraph and start another though from next paragraph, you must create a link between both thoughts. Otherwise it will create a gap whcih could be jarring.

It is advisable that you keep your text flowing smoothly from one though to another. It could be done by creating a bridge or link between them. The link will be established from the last line of the first paragraph and the first line of the next paragrap. For instance you can say:

"Still have questions? Please visit this"

"The Americians are doing their best but they have other cards as well to play.....",

"Is it a complete version of the story? The other side of the story is....."

"As we do not agree on this, finding more solutions will continue....."

Which things must be kept in mind before writing an article?

1. Editorial policy
2. Readers' demands, milieu and perceptions
3. Keeping the society and circumstances in mind
4. Never giving low scope to subjects
5. Considering the subject from the required angle
6. Never taking the facts and figures for granted
7. Considering the writing job as a serious subject
8. Checking the subjects and language

To what extent rechecking is important after writing an article.

Once you have written an article the following points must be rechecked:

First Draft:

Writer can write the first draft with ease. Just to make sure the main points flows with each other smoothly.

Look for Point

At first the writer is involved so much in writing notes, gathering statistics, anecdotes and supporting quotes. Once research is over he should go through again and find out that is it related and to the point and not going away from the subject. Is is easily describing the focal point?

Organize Material

Make all the relevant material in your easy access. Must have hard copies and notes properly organized. It is possible that the quotes or lead choosen will fit best at another place.

What are the five reliabelely check against which you can measure the facts you research?

You can measure the facts of yoru research though five reliability checks.

1. Accuracy

If one has seen an event happen and reported it carefully, he and his readers assume, the journalist has also reported it accurately. A writes always adds accuracy to the write-up through facts, which are correctly mentioned, and in turn, his readers never doubt facts mentioned. Accuracy of facts is the key to a successful writer.

2. Authenticity

Not to be confused with accuracy, authenticity is what you get automatically from a primary source. It comes from the horse's mouth – the logical, natural origin for the chosen information. If you cannot confirm your data, you be careful to present them as authentic statements and not verified facts. Research brings authenticity to the write-up when the facts are rightly and correctly placed.

3. Credibility

The source's way of telling his facts and backing them up or his proven track record, may lead you to the subjective conclusions that the source is credible and his facts can be believed. That is who to present the information to the readers. Credibility of a writer is because of authenticity of facts, which are confirmed through research, as it is the basic agenda behind every write-up. Nothing is done better, if the idea not properly investigated and facts not confirmed.

4. Plausibility

You may conclude that, subjectively, the fact makes sense to you and presumably to other people. That is how you will write it – not as verified fact but as plausible consideration.

5. Corroboration

Corroborate means to add proof or certainty to an account, statement or an idea with new information. Without corroboration, it will be difficult to prove the statement to be correct. Have facts and figures, comments, eyewitness account etc to prove your point, and never leave assertions sans corroborating them with facts.

You may obtain information from a separate, also believable source that substantiates the first source's fact. Then you will have objectively demonstrated, if not the accuracy, at least the honesty of your source.
