Introduction

This is the book for those kinds of people who want to speak the English language. We see in our surroundings, there are some people who are academically well educated but they can't speak English fluently. But we see there are some people who are not academically well educated but they speak English fluently. What is the reason behind this? How can we speak English without hesitation and pausing or reluctance? We learn from the advertisement of different institutes that "learn English within thirty days or fifteen days." If you visit the internet, there are a lot of applications claiming to learn English within thirty days, which is completely wastage of the time, there is nothing like this to learn English. The most common asked question by English learners is from a good English speaker, that how did you learn English? Most people say that to become a good English speaker you need hundred percent grasp on grammar and vocabulary, but in actual it is not. No doubt grammar makes your language smooth. But there is no need of hundred percent grammar and vocabulary to become a good English speaker. We see a little child who is no aware of grammar and vocabulary but he speaks English well. He observes the action and reaction of his parents and naturally learns English. We can't speak English by learning daily use sentences and grammar. The hundred percent grip of grammar is not the key to become fluent in English. There are some ways to learn the English language: observe the things and to get practice of learnt words.

It can be considered that we can forget the learnt words but in one situation you never forget a word of any language when you use that word while your conversation with others. When you use any word while your conversation that word becomes part of your own language, you have no need to memorize that word because it became your own language. While conversations with others it automatically uses. Therefore we should use the English words in our conversations with friends, family members or collogues. When you hear any new word from anyone, note it in your notebook to enhance your vocabulary. No need to worry about grammar. You need to learn the basic concepts of grammar to become fluent in English, which is provided in the book. It will make your language smooth.

Form of verbs and their use in sentences

Verbs are essential element of all sentences.
The important thing to remember regarding verbs is that every subject in a sentence must have a verb.
For example:

The subject in this sentence is "John" verb is "write "and the predicate is "writes an essay"

What is a verb and its functions in a sentence?
